

On Screen Productions - College Football Recruiting Information

Whether you choose On Screen Productions for your highlight video or have someone else create it for you, this is important information that may help you out.

Current football recruiting timetable as of 11-11-2011

If you are a senior now and you wish to pursue football in college (at any level) you need to act right away. It's not too late, but time is running out for you. Once your season ends you should have video highlights and recruiting information ready for recruiters as soon as possible. After the 2011 season ends scholarship spots will be filling up quickly, scholarship opportunities will be less and less the longer you wait. National letter of intent day is February 1, 2012.

If you are a junior now, you will want to get video highlights ready to send out by the end of February 2012 (at the latest). Once signing day is over for the current seniors (February 1, 2012) you will want to start marketing yourself as the recruiters focus on the next signing class.

If you are a sophomore now, you can start any time. Unfortunately, unless you've been playing varsity there may not be much video for you to use for highlights. If you do have video, putting together a highlight video will help you get recognized and onto college recruiters radar.

Can you really play college football?

Recruiting for college football takes place at all division levels. Obviously not everyone can play at USC, Florida or Oklahoma, but there are hundreds of smaller schools out there who just may need your skills and talents. These small school programs are very competitive and they put several players in the NFL or other pro leagues each year. Don't make the mistake of thinking you must play Division I or you won't play at all. Even if you are not one of the "stars" of your high school team there very well could be a college where you can play. What you must realize is that the recruiters will not come looking for you, you must seek them out. This is especially true for the smaller schools that don't have the big budgets for recruiting. It takes effort on your part to research schools, send emails, make contacts, send video, etc.

On Screen Productions offers full video service for your recruiting. We can create your highlight video, upload it to the Internet or put it onto DVD. For more information on our video recruiting packages please see our website at: onscreenproductions.us
